Practical Beauty

For Camille Styles, creativity and organization are inextricably tied. “I’m a huge believer in the idea that our surroundings have a major impact on our emotional well-being,” she says. “If my space is cluttered, I can’t even begin to think creatively.”

When the popular blogger, event planner, and author decided to transform a century-old bungalow in Austin, Texas, into her company headquarters, she chose California Closets to architect its key ingredient: a pretty and hardworking butler’s pantry. “So much of what I do is about creating beauty,” she says, “and it really can be found anywhere—even in order and organization!” Now, whether they’re searching for a block-print runner for her next hit Instagram or a mixing bowl for prepping a new passion fruit-chia pudding recipe, Styles and her team can put their hands on what they need in seconds: “Not only is this space streamlined and efficient, but it’s also where we feel inspired to do ace work.” —Hillary Brown

In a small house with limited closet space, it was crucial that we have tons of storage—and the right kind of storage.”

1. Styles and her team measured their vast collection of serving pieces, dishes, and baking equipment so California Closets could design shelving and drawers that fit their exact needs.

2. The house’s original shiplap walls infuse the space with vintage character that contrasts with the sleeker and more modern shelving.

3. Although the room is used as an office and studio space, Styles drew inspiration from the way hostesses and entertaining pros store their wares.

4. Large cubbies provide easy access to the team’s colorful linen collection.

5. Her creativity at work: Following a trip to Tuscany, Styles created a fresh panna cotta dessert with strawberries, balsamic vinegar, and basil.
